Introduction

Baryatinsky, a Governor Adjutant-General of the Caucasus presented a copy of the "Supreme Order" to the Caucasus Committee (in St. Petersburg) on 14 August 14, 1856, based on which he was authorized and instructed to organize a special main division of the party entrusted to him in Tiflisi and to operate it as an experiment for two years.

A committee specially established in Tiflisi by the decree of the Governor of the Caucasus, drew up and approved the constitution and staff for the main division, which were to be opened.

By the decree of Emperor Alexander II, the new constitution and staff presented by Baryatinsky, a Governor of the Caucasus Baryatinsky from January 1, 1859 was in force for another two years, as a justification from 1856.

Foundation riskn: 1859, m. 34148.

In 1882, a creator of the collection was renamed by "Commander-in-Chief of the Main Division Chancellery of Civil Unit of the Caucasus".

After assassination of Alexander II in 1881, reaction intensifies in Russia and in connection with this, repression and police surveillance increased.

Since 1883, Governor’s authorities were limited, for the purpose of centralization, a position of the Governor of the Caucasus was abolished and a commander-in-chief of the civilian unit of the Caucasus was appointed.

On April 23, 1883, the Senate passed a decree on transformation of the Caucasus and Transcaucasian Regions Division. The Caucasus Governor institutions, including a position of the governor, were abolished since July 1, 1883.

Foundations: riskn 1883 y., . 1521 m.

The collection's materials were re-evacuated from the North Caucasus in 1923, where they were evacuated in connection with the opening of the Caucasian front in 1914 during the first imperialist war.

The collection was originally described in 1927. At the same time, an additional description was drawn up (see Book 3). In 1937, an additional description was compiled (see Book 4) and in 1947 and later, an additional description was drawn up (see Book 5).

In 1949, 299 compiled items were received from the Krasnodar Regional State Archives, which were added to the main collection (see collection 5, description 2). The collection was subjected to an examination of the scientific value of the documentary material in 1948; In the same year, an inspection was conducted on the availability and condition of the collection's documentary materials, which revealed deficiencies in the collection's condition.

The creator of collection discussed the following issues: discussion of transformation of the Caucasus and Transcaucasia countries, annual reports of chief executives, heads of regions, as well as institutions subordinate to the Governor, issues of monitoring educational institutions and students; engaged in expulsion from the region of people and students guilty of participation in socialist circles, in the action against the tsarist autocracy and in establishing and opening of other administrative institutions, schools, rewarding employees for long service, hiring and firing, resignation and illness, granting pensions and benefits, accommodation, calling officials of the central provinces of Russia to work in Transcaucasia, questions about "Raskolniks" (schismatics) and more.

In 1956, work was included in the archive plan to edit description of collection No. 5 - Highest Command Civilian Unit in the Caucasus", which aimed to correct description of the collection and make them more convenient to use. For this purpose, while editing, if possible, all additional descriptions were described in chronological order in the main description, opened headings that do not reveal content of the case, corrected inaccurate and politically incorrect statements in the headings, etc. During editing, cases not related to this collection were also separated, which were not related to this collection and attached to the respective funds. Multiple storage units were combined as a single unit, but described in different locations.

When editing the collection's materials, they were not subject to examination, due to the absence of cases of the category that is not subject to storage.

The collection contained materials for 1858-1883 years: transformation of civil department, decrees of the Senate, orders of the Emperor and the Governor of the Caucasus regarding personal composition, on the Governor's circulars, orders on the opening of administrative institutions, schools, departments, expulsion of "politically unreliable" persons from the region, publication of newspapers and magazines, granting permission for educational observation.

Decision on granting pensions and benefits, recruitment of officials from Russia to work in Transcaucasia, elections in noble institutions, employee data, personal affairs and others.

Description is attached by a list of abbreviated words, a subject-thematic table of contents and a table of old numbers, in which the new ones are indicated according to the description.
